The Desert Has Bloomed

This is the desert last year at this time, it had not rained for a few years.

This year abundant rain has caused the desert to bloom and turn green. As you can see from the picture above.

Farmers now tend their flocks on thick grass.

Hashimou stated that farm land is thriving with a very good millet crop.

This is the same horizon as the picture above, it shows the result of how one well can help, but it also takes the blessing of God and rain to bring this much change and growth in a few months.

Hashimou asked us in 2011 to build wells in the Maradi area because of the crop failure as shown in this picture, they didn't know when their next meal would come from. We have been trying to figure out how to bring them water all this time but things happen slower in Africa than we would like. But the important thing is now they have water.

The picture above shows a well in the village Pundu Duba, the well is a community well and is located in between 2 villages that are 180 miles north of Maradi.

This well was not any easy task, the water was 131 yards deep. This well is very deep and very far away and it would not be cost effective to take our equipment and team to drill there. Our equipment was unable to reach the depth of the water table, we partnered with a church (Called House of Praise,) and together we were able to finance the well, water tower with reservoir tank, pump, solar energy supply, pipes and hoses etc. Because of you, over 1200 people are now enjoying fresh clean water.

64% of Niger's rural population lacks access to clean water. About 9 in 10 citizens lack proper way to dispose of their own waste. These water woes promote disease, stagnate education and economic growth, and result in the majority of rural Niger's infant and child deaths. Other villages still need your help.

Many kids are now understanding the water crisis that 663 million people in the world do not have clean water.

Recently three different groups decided that they were going to raise money by : (1) doing a walk at their school and asking for pledges for the steps taken.

(2) A little girl ask friends and relatives to celebrate her Bat Mitzvah in lieu of gifts to donate to Wells 4 Wellness to help provide fresh clean water.

(3) Children had a lemonade stand while visiting their grandma this summer.

Together these amazing children raised almost $3,000.
